

Bree Owens

Bree is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker who received her MSW at the University of Denver. After earning her degree she practiced social work in London, England. Following her return home, Bree spent several years in the Emergency Department of an inner-city Level 1 Trauma Center. It was during that time that she saw the great disparity in how end of life occurs and the possibility of ‘hope’ within illness-based end of life. The desire to bring that hope to as many patients and families as possible brought her to her passion and current field of palliative care. Bree has been thrilled to help establish such a pioneering program that is adding value and opportunity to the Social Work profession.
