

Lin Sue Flood

Biography

Lin Sue Flood is director of community engagement at Hospice of the Valley - overseeing marketing, fund development, volunteers and creative services.

Prior to her work with hospice care, Lin Sue spent 31 years as a newscaster for 12News. Now, instead of delivering the latest headlines, she connects our community to the compassionate care provided by one of the largest not-for-profit hospices in the country.

She grew up in Great Falls, Montana, graduated cum laude from Willamette (pronounced Will-LAM-it) University in Salem, Oregon and received her MSJ from the Medill (Ma-DILL) School of Journalism at Northwestern University.

She and her very spoiled standard poodle Max are a pet therapy team for Hospice of the Valley and love bringing cheer to patients and families.